Celebration Exotic Car Festival 2021
By Jim Weed

How fitting is it the first car event I went to in 2021 is called Celebration Exotic Car Festival? What a celebration it was.

Jeff and Jim Ippoliti are the driving force behind this event, now in its 18th year. Proceeds are donated to several charities including Make-A-Wish, Special Olympics and the Arnold Palmer Children's Hospital. To date over $3 million has been donated.

Due to COVID the event was not held in 2020, another casualty of car events during that difficult year. Even with Florida lifting restrictions there had to be some apprehension as to how well this year's event would be attended.

I made plans to drive down from Atlanta to Orlando and see firsthand if things would be back to normal, or as normal as possible. Due to our printing schedule, time would be limited to enjoying the Friday night dinner and Saturday's concours displays.

If I could have stayed, I would have enjoyed Saturday night dinner at the Disney World Four Seasons Resort. Taittinger Champagne hosts the reception and ZD Wines provides wonderful pairings with the gourmet dinner. This year comedy and magic was the entertainment with Henry Cho and David Magee.

I have attended the dinner several times and the food, wine and entertainment are always first class.

The Sunday rally is open to all cars participating in the concours, proving not all exotics are pampered for show. The police escort allows for much spirited driving though Florida back roads. What a great way to knock the cobwebs off both car and driver before a couple of days at Daytona International Raceway.

Two days of track time are available at Daytona filling up Monday and Tuesday before heading home. I wish I could have enjoyed it all.

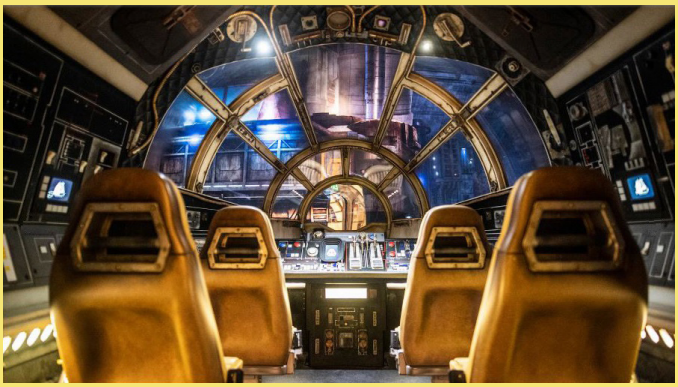
As it was, I was able to arrive Friday afternoon in downtown Celebration. A quaint, planned city, by Disney, the houses and buildings harken back to a simpler time when life moved slower and a bicycle was the quickest method of transportation, at least in town.

Cars were already starting to be placed along the closed streets. Dazzling morsels of what tomorrow would present. Tonight, we would enjoy dinner and rides at Disney Hollywood Studios.

Busses arrive in downtown Celebration and we board for the short ride to the Disney complex. Police motorcycles lead our procession and block off traffic along our route. Once rolling, the bus doesn't stop for lights or traffic. Having the police hopscotching ahead is an experience that never gets old.

Once at Disney we head toward entrances while the rest of the public is heading home. We have the park to ourselves. Dinner is set up along one of the thoroughfares but first there are rides to enjoy.

I start with the Millennium Falcon. As we board the spaceship, I settle behind the pilot position. Flying a real airplane is fun and I have always made it to landing with all the parts still attached. I can not say the same for the Millennium Falcon. We survived the trip, and they say the craft can be used again. If I flew like that, I would need a new airplane for each flight!



The next ride was the Aerosmith Rock 'n' Roller Coaster. This coaster was fast and twisty. Upside down and around. All contained in a dark room with lights and shadows it was a wild ride. I love a good coaster but I was glad I had not eaten first.

The last ride was the Tower of Terror and I'll admit I didn't ride that one. It was fun not having to stand in line for an hour to ride and I enjoyed the two I went on, but food was calling.

At one of the tables I met Jim and Chris. They didn't bring a car, but they tried to. They began their trip in upstate New York in a 1959 Bentley. Their Bentley made it to Maryland whereupon something fatal brought it to a stop. Needless to say, it was an adventure, and they will do it again.

There is a lesson in there; nothing ventured, nothing gained. We love our cars and in the end it's the stories of our adventures and places we've been that make the best memories. Ferraris are meant to be driven!

Saturday dawned clear, bright and warm. Ferraris and other exotics lined the streets.

I start at the non-Ferrari end. There are GTOs, not that kind, but Pontiac; and a 429 Mustang. Clearly these owners take the same pride as Ferrari owners in their cars.

I stop and talk to Michael Grinder. He is a former subscriber but sold his Ferrari a while back. Today he has brought a Bricklin. Not only is his Bricklin there but a total of three have shown up. When was the last time you've seen one, much less three!

I also pass a Pantera and a group of Lotuses (Loti?). The McLaren area is filled with several examples along with a few Lamborghinis.

As I come around the corner there is a GTO, yes one of those, but I recognize it immediately as Tefft Smith's replica. While I know, and Smith does not hide the origins, most of the onlookers do not. Standing and listening to the comments is interesting.

Smith occasionally fires up the engine and the crowd surges over to hear the sweet sound of 12-cylinders. Afterward, he opens the door and invites children to sit in the GTO. There is no better smile on a child's face when they realize he is not kidding. I bet many in the crowd wish they were ten again to have the same opportunity.

Next to the GTO was a gold 330 GT 2+2 with red interior. I talked to the owner, David Micciulla. He had the car restored in Italy and it is incredibly nice. Gold with red is unusual but it is an original color combination. I personally think this was the best Ferrari present but there were also several other contenders.

The rest of the Ferraris are what I would consider modern Ferraris. There were Testarossas in all three variants; TR, 512 TR and F512 M. 348s, 360s and F430s were also well represented.

Bill Scott has a 308 GTS QV he has owned a long time. He mentioned he might be looking for something else. We had a lengthy discussion on the good points of this model. He drives it often and likes the analog feel of the car. In the end, I think he is going to keep it and continue to enjoy the car another ten years or so.

Among a group of 550 Maranellos and a 575 M Maranello was a silver FF with a bronze stripe across the front fenders and bronze wheels. It looked so good I had to do a double take to realize it was an FF.

Around the next corner was a black Lamborghini 5000 Quatrovalvole. The engine cover was up and there was no fuel injection to be seen. Six carburators graced the inside of the vee, just as God intended.

Across the street was a selection from Ferrari of Central Florida. Among several 812 GTS and F8 Spiders was a Roma in red.

The Ferrari that had the largest crowd around it was a Monza SP1. This special car looks interesting in person. Clearly a one-person go-kart. If fun has an icon, it must be an emoji of a Monza.

The highlight of the show is a special car corral in show center. For a donation you can go behind the barriers and get a chance for a photograph with a celebrity or special car. There was an Enzo and a LaFerrari available along with several other supercars, like a Pagani Huayra and Zonda.

Of all the events I go to, Celebration Exotic Car Festival is one of the fun ones. Everybody is there to see friends and enjoy the cars. There are many interesting cars, not just Ferraris, but movie cars, exotics and American muscle. The dinners are a wonderful way to meet new people and it all goes to a good cause.

Did I mention Jeff and Jim Ippoliti have raised over $3 million for charity? If you haven't been, it should go onto your calendar next year. The children are worth it.

Speed Reading
By Dom Miliano

In the spring a young man's fancy (and a young woman's) turns to … driving the Ferrari tucked away in the garage. With warm weather on the horizon, everyone in the colder climates is planning long drives with the windows open and the engine singing Italian opera at full song.

It's why you own a Ferrari and as someone once said, "If you don't get it, I can't explain it to you." Of course, before you take your baby out for its first big drive, you probably do some fundamental maintenance tasks. Tire pressures, oil level, a loving wash and wax are on the "to-do" list. But what are you doing about the most important part of any Ferrari? That would be – The Nut That Holds the Wheel – by the way, that's you! I have a suggestion…

I have been driving since the Johnson Administration (LBJ, not Andrew) and have been a car nut every minute of those years. The first time I rode in a sports car with someone who knew how to drive I found out that I had a lot to learn about behind-the-wheel skills.

Along the way, I attended professional driving schools like Skip Barber and signed up for car club high performance driver events (HPDE) and Driver Education sessions at racetracks from Sebring to Road America.

I have even ridden right seat with some of the best drivers in the sport as well, hoping that some of their magic would rub off. I tried to be a sponge and soak up every trick, nuance, and tidbit of advice that would make me better, safer, and on the track, a fraction faster.

When I wasn't on the road or at a track, I bought books written by the world's most famous drivers so I could further gain their insights into proficiencies that I wanted – make that needed! I discovered (sadly) that being a great driver doesn't always make you an effective educator. While many of the books I read were interesting, most were only a little helpful. They all were lacking that cohesive thread that solved the performance-driving puzzle for me. That was until I found two of the best books for making the reader a better driver – not just on the track, but on the road too.

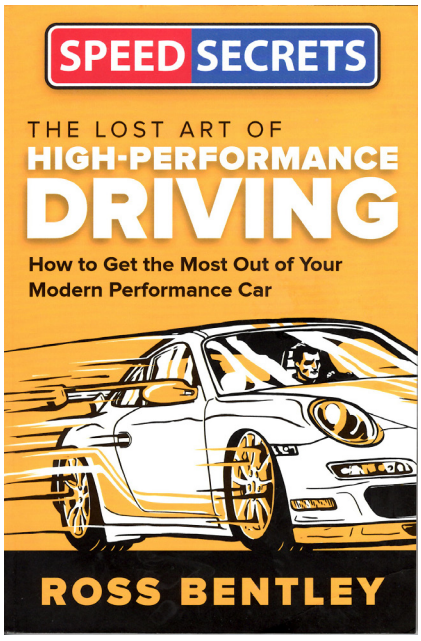
Speed Secrets

I attended a seminar recently where a driver / driver coach named Ross Bentley spoke; giving the crowd insights unto what he thought "performance driving" was and how anyone – even a person who just drove on the street – could learn something he called a "lost art".

Bentley has the credentials to make his approach credible. He is a well-known performance driving coach, racing driver, author and speaker. His performance coaching spans executive / business coaching to sports. Plus, his DNA is strong, having grown up in a racing household.

During his seminar, he mentioned his latest book called "The Lost Art of High-Performance Driving". The book's subtitle told me that this could be a great book to recommend to every Ferrari driver – "How to Get the Most Out of Your Modern Performance Car".

Bentley first defines what he calls high-performance driving – and achieving it is a real stretch in a world of distractions like cell phones, satellite radio, and mind-numbing traffic jams. He defines it as, "doing or performing everything behind the wheel at the highest level possible." He doesn't cut the reader any slack stating that this encompasses all aspects of the driving process – parking, smooth blending into a congested line of traffic, and precisely matching revs as you make a perfect downshift.



Of course, cornering on a racetrack comes into the description too – in sections specifically devoted to track events - but he emphasizes that you can be a high-performance driver without ever turning a wheel at the track.

He came by his philosophy when, on the way home from a long day running his driving instruction business, he lost focus and, on a stretch of road he knew well, he hit a manhole cover. It shocked him and told him that, although he had been executing a perfect drive up to that point, he had lost focus and it cost him.

He made up his mind from that point to make it his goal to execute every drive perfectly. He said that focusing on "the perfect drive" made him a high-performance driver. This, he says, kept him single-minded and awake. He freely admits that he has never achieved that perfect drive but he keeps working at it.

The book goes on to describe the steps that he follows on every drive as he strives for a perfect drive.

His goals for the reader are simple: to make us aware of our habits, both good and bad. Prepare us to learn more about driving every time we get behind the wheel. Provide us with both the theory and, more important, the practice of high-performance driving. To help us understand our modern (and not so modern) car – its technology and limitations. To inspire us to want to constantly learn and improve our driving. And, finally, to have fun!

Chapter and Verse – Every aspect of driving is discussed in easy to understand detail. He starts with what he calls in chapter 1 the Performance Driver's Mindset.

He preaches that we should not be constantly looking to develop a particular skill or insight. What you should develop is "a burning desire to learn and improve" while keeping "an open mind to new techniques and approaches."

He writes about "Responsibility" and "Being a Role Model". After reading his description of what that means, I decided to follow what he calls "the yawn effect". He also describes it as "collaborative" driving and setting an example.

I tested this for several days at an intersection by my house that, via a left turn, leads cars onto the highway. A block down from that intersection is a traffic light and when it's red, people are supposed to leave the left turn lane open so traffic can cross. People don't always obey the sign but when they do, I made sure that I tooted my car's horn or flashed my lights or waved a thanks buddy thumbs up to the people who did.

I then watched in my rear view mirror and, to my great amazement, the stream of cars behind me benefitted from the good will or collaboration I spread, letting the cars make the left, long after the light up stream turned red. And this wasn't an isolated case.

Without exaggeration, the scene has been replayed many times and with the same effect. Score one for High-Performance Driving!

He goes on to caution the reader to "Watch Your Speed". He cites examples of traveling at the posted speeds and while on the highway I tend to live by the "I'm safe at 10 over", I have made a point to stick closer to the posted limits and as a result I have noticed less of the New Jersey, "I'm a race car driver and will beat you" rage around me.

Fundamentally, Bentley says we need three skills to drive – Traffic Skills, Vehicle Control Skills and Mental Skills. We all had to demonstrate Traffic Skills to get a license but the other two were left to us to learn – sometimes the hard way.

He freely admits that he thinks not everyone has picked these skills up. To help us develop the missing skills, he filled the book with whole chapters defining important subjects. These Include:

Vision - He preaches the tried and true method called "eyes up" and even includes tips on how to precisely set the mirrors.

Seating and Body Position – He explains how to set your seat and steering wheel for better safety and control.

Steering – He preaches the 9 and 3 position theory and emphasizes why it's important.

Footwork – This seems like a simple subject at first – gas, brake, clutch (if you have one) but if the seating and steering are right, the footwork becomes even more important.

Shifting – Even with an F1 gearbox, shifting is still important. But it becomes even more so with a manual clutch / stick combo and he covers it perfectly with diagrams and simple-to-understand text.

Vehicle Dynamics – He defines what could be a difficult to grasp concept – weight transfer – simply and effectively. You will never be confused about under or oversteer again and will be better able to understand how each happen and how to correct or – on a track – use them to your advantage.

Of course, this race driver goes over driving on the track in a DE or HPDE event. But the fundamentals still apply about mirrors, vision, seating, steering, and the "Mental Game".

I think anyone who drives a high performance car – and if you are reading this, that's you - will benefit from Bentley's book. It is well written and crammed with valuable information that will improve your driving and help you become a high-performance driver.

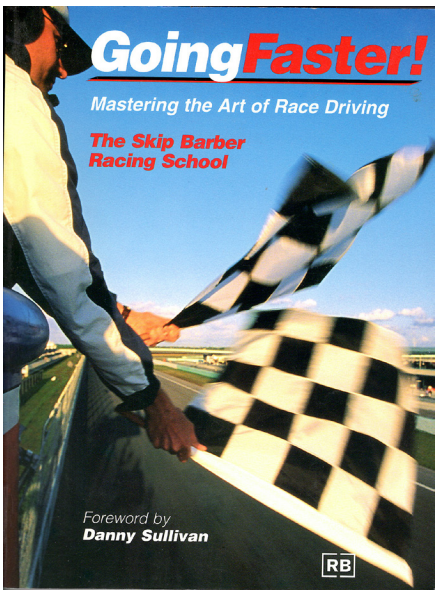
Going Faster - Mastering the Art of Race Driving

I got my competition license several years ago at Watkins Glen through a racing school run by the Skip Barber organization.

The people who teach their courses are proven educators. Plus, their behind-the-wheel credentials are impressive.



This book is the manual they use to instruct their students and one that, after the on-track instruction is completed, can be used as both a reference and refresher.

Every aspect of the art (and science) of race driving is covered simply but with all the seriousness and depth the topics require. I currently instruct new students at various car club DE and HPDE events and I suggest to every one of them that they purchase this book and read, at the very least, Part 1: The Fundamentals, before coming to the track.

Part 1 covers critical concepts such as: line, corner exit speed, and braking. The book's first 33 pages build the instructive foundation that will make you a better on-track driver and the next time you put on your helmet, provide you with a better, more satisfying learning experience.

But you don't have to take my word for it. Racing legend, author, and successful racecar driver, Denise McCluggage wrote a column for AutoWeek many years ago that I clipped out and have shared many times with the students I instruct.

McCluggage began racing at a time when there were few formal racecar driver education programs so her knowledge came from the school of hard knocks.

Here is what Denise McCluggage wrote: "Just reading this book with any degree of attention will improve your driving whether on the road or in your next club race."

Denise added, "... [even when you watch racing on TV] you will experience a greater understanding of what is happening. (It is also good for settling arguments or pretending to erudition.)". She finalized her AutoWeek review by adding: "Whether you are a serious racing driver, a road warrior or just an observer of motorcraft, your bookshelf is empty if Going Faster isn't on it. Repair the oversight..." Serious words from a serious driver!

These books are available from any of the many on-line retailers and their combined price will set you back less than a full tank of high-test for the Ferrari.

Grab them both, sit in a comfortable chair near a lamp with good light and get ready to get ready for the 2021 driving season. And don't lift!

COMPETIZIONE

246 GT/LM, S/N 02678 (1971 Euro. prod.). Red. Commissioned by Luigi Chinetti for his North American Racing Team (N.A.R.T.) through Ferrari's "Servizio Assistenza Clienti" department. The car was prepared to racing specifications. 02678 had a successful race at LeMans, however, with Laffeach and Doncieux bringing the car to a 17th place overall and 2nd in class finish. After Le Mans 02678 went back to Ferrari for repairs from the damage suffered. After the repairs, the car was sent back to Chinetti and then sold to Harley Cluxton who wanted to race it in the last race of the 1972 World Manufacturers Championship race at Watkins Glen. It was at Watkins Glen that the car carried the number 24 with the same sponsorship livery the car displays today (now on number 46). After the Watkins Glen race Cluxton traded 02678 to Joe Marchetti, who sold the car to John Carmack in 1973 and kept it until 1981 when he sold it to the current owner. 15,742 km. $2,500,000. 4606
