

Formula One Recap By Bob Varsha

In this space back in July, I offered a preview of the pandemic-delayed Formula One World Championship season. Reading over that article now that the strangest season in history is complete, I think it's fair to say that I nailed some points, and whiffed on others, as the 70th season of F1 played out.

Enormous credit goes to the FIA, the Formula 1 Group, the teams and the promoters for pulling together a viable schedule amid constantly shifting national travel restrictions.

The measures put in place included slashing the number of credentialed personnel and implementation of a comprehensive testing regimen. More than 78,000 total tests produced a mere seventy-odd positive results, and more than 1,200 people moved in and out of twelve countries safely.

In July there were a mere half-dozen confirmed races, all in Europe. Once the FIA loosened the requirement for an international calendar, the door was opened to additional nearby circuits, including first-timers Mugello in Italy and Portimao in Portugal. Old favorites Imola, Nürburgring and Turkey were also added.

The final tally of seventeen grands prix, jammed into just twenty-three weekends, surpassed the fifteen required to trigger lucrative television and sponsor contracts, though some tracks had to be rented.

I predicted in July that we would see little change in the hierarchy among the teams, with Mercedes-AMG, Scuderia Ferrari and Red Bull Racing dominating.

I got two-thirds of that right, and sadly the exception was Ferrari. The red cars were a shambles: a handful in corners, slow on the straights. The cars were even lapped in the finale.

There was little hope offered from Maranello; team principal Mattia Binotto even declined to attend late-season races.

In the end Ferrari failed to lead a single lap in a season for only the third time ever. Charles Leclerc and Sebastian Vettel never qualified on the front row, and finished 8th and 13th among drivers. The team finished sixth among Constructors, their worst since 1980.

Vettel pronounced his five seasons as a Ferrari driver "a failure" as he moves to a new home at Racing Point/Aston Martin in 2021. Leclerc's new teammate, Carlos Sainz, over from McLaren, may be wondering what he was thinking.

Meanwhile, Mercedes and Red Bull remained at the sharp end, and even that wasn't a close-fought thing.

Lewis Hamilton dominated as expected, with eleven poles and an equal number of victories in just sixteen races due to a COVID positive, and his points alone were more than the RBR two-car total!

His seventh drivers title matches Michael Schumacher's record, and he surpassed the German's marks for poles with his 98th and wins with 95.

Teammate Valtteri Bottas provided support, managing five poles, two race wins, and runner-up in the standings. Mercedes seventh constructors' crown keeps them undefeated in the turbo-hybrid era.

Bottas is confirmed for another season in 2021, and while Hamilton has yet to renew, he has no options if he plans to continue his extraordinary career.

Red Bull Racing star Max Verstappen could make things entertaining when he had the car under him that he needed and he stayed out of trouble.

The team updated their car furiously as the season wore on, and paid public tribute to Honda for improvements.

The Dutchman won twice, in the second race at Silverstone and the finale, from his only pole, in Abu Dhabi. His eleven total podiums left him just nine points behind Bottas in the final standings.

Teammate Alex Albon was utterly eclipsed by Verstappen but still produced two third-place finishes and seventh in points. It wasn't enough, and he was replaced for 2021 by Sergio Perez, who was dismissed by Racing Point.

More importantly, Honda announced their planned departure from F1 at the end of 2021, leaving Red Bull and junior team Alpha Tauri scrambling.

My prediction that the fight for "best of the rest" would involve Racing Point, Renault and McLaren was accurate.

I admit the winner, McLaren, was a bit of a surprise. The team faced a financial crisis, losing $227 million in the first quarter, laying off employees, borrowing $195 million, and then planning the sale and leaseback of the team's factory.

Finally, the team announced sale of a $250 million stake to American investment group MSP Sports Capital. Despite the turmoil the team managed consistent finishes from Carlos Sainz and Lando Norris, sixth and ninth in the points with a podium each.

Daniel Ricciardo replaces Sainz next season, and the trick will be continuing the upward momentum.

The "Couлда, Woulda, Shoulda" trophy goes to fourth place Racing Point, whose car was often second-best only to the Mercedes, no surprise as it was basically a knock-off of last year's winner.

Lance Stroll took a shock pole in Turkey, while Sergio Perez won the second Bahrain race, his breakthrough after a decade of trying, and the first for the team since 2003 as Jordan Grand Prix.

But the team was penalized fifteen championship points over the copying issue; both drivers missed races due to positive tests (welcome back, Nico Hulkenberg!) and neither car finished in the points in two of the final three races, with three retirements.

Perez and Stroll finished fourth and eleventh, so of course the Mexican was pushed out to make way for Sebastian Vettel, since Stroll's dad owns the team.

It's never a good thing for a factory team to be beaten by a customer outfit, but that is where Renault wound up, 21 points and two places behind the McLaren entries powered by the French brand. Still, it was Renault's best finish in the five years since it returned as a factory team, with three podiums from Daniel Ricciardo, fifth in points, and Esteban Ocon, 12th.

Ricciardo now moves on to drive for McLaren, his place taken by Fernando Alonso, who returns from a two-year hiatus.

The 39-year old Spaniard, who scored the team's most recent win in Japan in 2008, was allowed to participate in the post-season young driver test in Abu Dhabi, where he turned the fastest lap. It was with Renault, which will race next season under subsidiary brand Alpine, that Alonso earned his World Championships in 2005 and 2006.

Everyone likes a good underdog story, and that is what former Toro Rosso team Alpha Tauri presents.

In the 2008 Italian GP at Monza, a young Sebastian Vettel gave the team its first victory; this year Pierre Gasly produced its second at the same race, in front of a delirious crowd.

No, it wasn't as good as a Ferrari victory, but Alpha Tauri, which began life as Minardi many years ago, is based in Faenza, Italy. That may explain why Gasly returns in 2021, while teammate Daniil Kvyat will not, replaced by 20-year old Japanese Yuki Tsunoda, third in F2 this season.

Both Alfa Romeo and the North Carolina-based Haas F1 team might well blame another pair of humble team finishes, eighth and ninth, respectively, on the shortcomings of their Ferrari power.

Ninth was also the best race finish among the drivers: Kimi Räikkönen and Antonio Giovinazzi for Alfa, Kevin Magnussen and Romain Grosjean for Haas.

The Alfa pair will return, while Grosjean's miraculous escape from his fiery accident in Bahrain prevented a proper farewell, as both he and Magnussen are out.

Their replacements are new F2 Champion Mick Schumacher, son of Michael, and Russian Nikita Mazepin, son of Dmitry, another billionaire.

The younger Mazepin stumbled right off the bat by posting a video of himself committing sexual assault. Given the resulting internet outrage, let's call his seat pending.

On a more positive note, the only American F1 team has committed to the series for another five years.

Finally, there is Williams, a team with world championship success in the '80s and '90s, but sadly mediocre since then.

This was emphasized when driver George Russell, also a Mercedes reserve, stepped in for the quarantined Lewis Hamilton in Bahrain and nearly took pole.

Only a team error and a late puncture in the race prevented the Brit from winning.

For the first time ever, Williams failed to score a single championship point. The team was sold during the season to New York equity firm Dorilton Capital, offering hope for the future.

Russell returns to his seat alongside deep-pocketed but performance-challenged Canadian Nicholas Latifi.

Next year lower revenues will be stretched tighter over the biggest calendar in history, twenty-three races.

Among the cost-saving measures are the new budget cap and the reuse of this year's cars. But that may all be premature.

Will 2021 feature an exciting new normal? Or are we facing another cut-and-paste calendar, and a paddock filled with isolation bubbles and testing swabs?

We'll soon know, as it starts, hopefully, barely three months from now.

Happy New Year!

By Jim Weed

Once again, I sit down to offer random thoughts and some insight about the year past and what the future may bring.

First, I hope all had a Merry Christmas and you were able to spend it with family and friends. This year has certainly been trying with events being cancelled and lockdowns in many cities and states.

Fortunately, Georgia was opened early. We have not had to endure the same closures and economic struggles many other states have had.

Cathy and I work from our homes anyway so the lockdown has not really affected our normal routines. The Ferrari Market Letter still gets organized and printed every two weeks and as long as the postal system continues to accept your newsletters, it should arrive like clockwork.

We did have some problems early in the year with our foreign subscribers. The mail did not make it across the oceans in a timely manner. Amazingly, we send the FML to five of the seven continents of the world. Currently we don't send paper to South America; we used to, but they moved to an on-line account.

There aren't any Ferraris in Antarctica, nor any subscribers for print or on-line. I think a GTC4Lusso might be right at home there.

As for on-line accounts we do cover all the populated continents and the mail gets there a whole lot quicker. E-mail is an amazing tool.

As I look at the past year and the articles contained in those twenty-six issues, it is clear how much Cathy and I had to step up our game. Usually, there are enough events and happenings to fill each issue.

We determined many years ago that our core business is bringing Ferraris for sale into your home or office. It makes no difference if you are interested in buying or selling, or just want to keep up with market direction, it is the classified ads that make the magazine what it is.

Of the three hundred Ferraris in each issue, we continue to have a good cross section of each model. Even the older V-12 cars get advertised with regularity.

Of course, newer Ferraris are more prevalent due to higher production totals, but then again, the market for newer cars is greater. Our value is in bringing the greatest variety of Ferraris into one magazine so you can see what is available and at what price.

The speed at which we operate is amazing, at least for a printed magazine. We strive to make sure all ads are current. We check the dealer websites and remove sold cars. We contact owners after six issues to make sure they still want to advertise.

Our two-week schedule means the time an ad is given to us it can be in the hands of a fellow subscriber in a little more than a week and no more than two weeks later. There is no other magazine that can offer that level of turnaround.

Currently the on-line edition follows the same two-week schedule. The website is updated the Monday after the mailing date. There may be a time when we make the on-line edition live with running changes. For now, we have always been a paper magazine first and as we begin our 46th year of print medium we are not yet ready to make that leap.

We also decided the editorial, (that is this section) shouldn't be too many pages. You get enough media blasted at you every day. As the Millennials like to say TLDR. That means Too Long Didn't Read.

So, we try to keep the front pages down to a couple of (hopefully!) interesting articles. Events and auctions, history and personal stories, news of the day and unfortunately, obituaries.

As Cathy and I say to each other all the time "We get to do this again in two weeks". If I were to use up all my thoughts and articles in one issue what would I be able to do for the next?

Which comes back to last year. Without events, or in-person auctions, even racing was affected, and the rough year Ferrari had, there wasn't a lot to crow about. See Bob Varsha's article in this issue.

We had to really step up and be more creative. As I've said before, I'm not a trained writer; I barely passed every English class I ever took. I can twist wrenches with the best mechanics and manage an entire shop full of prima-donna mechanics, but write?

Write I did. As I look back on the many articles presented in these pages, I am surprised at how many I did this year. Some I thought were groundbreaking. Some I thought were throw-a-ways.

The ones I thought were great, Cathy thought were just OK. The ones she thought were great, I thought were OK. Maybe a writer is his worst critic.

I am always grateful for feedback, good or bad. Several articles resounded with the audience. Both Cathy and I thought they were OK, but I received a number of positive comments. I am always glad to take credit for the good ones.

I hope I have expanded your knowledge of Ferrari, the cars and the factory. I have written about individual models and people, reviewed auctions I never attended, movies and books. Although I did actually see the movies and read the books. What else was there to do during Pebble Beach week?

The car reviews are the most challenging. Even though I have been around Ferraris for forty-five years, there is always something new to learn. Often those articles start with four or five books from our extensive library opened and stacked with little slips of paper sticking out.

It always amazes me how different information is presented and the disparity of that information. The old joke is, put five mechanics in a room and ask what is the best engine oil? You may very well get five different answers. Research can be as exasperating.

The multiple books along with vast experience can usually yield a decent article to present, hopefully, to make you more knowledgeable. I know I always come away a little smarter and observant at the next concours.

This year we lost some great folks who helped bring passion to our hobby. Kirk F. White and Dave Seibert were two who had a great impact on our lives, the Ferrari club and Ferrari in general. Stirling Moss, one of the great drivers, also left us this year. His exploits driving for, and against, Ferrari, helped bring the Ferrari mystique to life.

There were others, John Weinberger of Continental Autosports, and Georgio Nada of book fame, who were not able to be honored within these pages. Both were instrumental in furthering Ferrari sales, knowledge and information.

As I look forward to the new year there is hope. The Cavallino Classic is on schedule for January. West Palm Beach in the winter is a great place to be and I'm sure there will be many beautiful Ferraris present.

Amelia Island will be back and by the time Pebble Beach rolls around we should be well on our way to beating the virus. Life will return to normal.

The presidential election will be soon finalized and no matter which side you are on, we will live and adapt to whatever has been decided. New policies, taxes or regulations may affect our Ferrari world but we always figure out ways to overcome. The luxury tax of the 1980s comes to mind. Somehow life continues on.

As we start another year, let us look to the future and hope for good things to happen. The Ferrari Market Letter will continue to entertain and inform you for another twenty-six issues. We always look forward to meeting our subscribers at the various events and meets we go to. Don't be shy, come up and say 'hi'.

In one of my articles, I wrote about driving the F430 Berlinetta. Gary Dowling graciously allowed me to enjoy his car. We are better friends because of the shared experience.

Ed Gilbertson said it best "Ferraris are meant to be driven!" As you go out on the roads remember to share your love of Ferrari and try to pass that love to the next generation.

Dowling is doing his part; the picture of his grandson says it all.

Happy New Year!
Jim and Cathy hope it will be the best one yet.

COMPETIZIONE

246 GT/LM, S/N 02678 (1971 Euro. prod.). Red. Commissioned by Luigi Chinetti for his North American Racing Team (N.A.R.T.) through Ferrari's "Servizio Assistenza Clienti" department. The car was prepared to racing specifications. 02678 had a successful race at LeMans, however, with Laffeach and Doncieux bringing the car to a 17th place overall and 2nd in class finish. After Le Mans 02678 went back to Ferrari for repairs from the damage suffered. After the repairs, the car was sent back to Chinetti and then sold to Harley Cluxton who wanted to race it in the last race of the 1972 World Manufacturers Championship race at Watkins Glen. It was at Watkins Glen that the car carried the number 24 with the same sponsorship livery the car displays today (now on number 46). After the Watkins Glen race Cluxton traded 02678 to Joe Marchetti, who sold the car to John Carmack in 1973 and kept it until 1981 when he sold it to the current owner. 15,742 km. $2,500,000. 4526

THE COBRA-FERRARI WARS 1963-1965, 2nd edition signed by the author. The award-winning story of "the men who made the adventure possible." From the book [Mark Popov-Dadiani]: "We had all manners of troubles getting the cars out of Italy because of Customs. What goes in has to have a carnet (bill of lading) and what goes out has to have the same one. When we finally did get the cars two weeks later, we worked hard on them because they were in such horrible shape and we didn't have much time. We'd pull the motors out, put them up on jacks, beat out the metal, re-weld the pickup points -- slam-bang. It wasn't very precise work. It just had to be done." $49.95 shipping included within U.S. 4525
