

6 Years and 157 Issues Later By Jim Weed

As I sit down to knock out some profound article regarding Ferrari history, event or anything else that tickles my fancy, I realize this issue is a poignant one for me personally.

It was exactly six years ago I became editor for the Ferrari Market Letter. In issue 3816 my first official act as editor was to write a preview of what to expect during Monterey week.

Since then I have presided over one hundred and fifty seven issues. I have not had to write an article for every issue. We have other contributors to help carry that load.

Auction reports for the big ones are saved for Rick Carey. His experience and perseverance allows him to view and evaluate the mass of cars at multiple auctions. Scottsdale, Amelia and Monterey are just a few he covers. Those locations are populated by several different auction companies with hundreds of cars flowing through the tents over several days.

Carey provides us with Ferrari reports but he inspects many other marques from the exotic to the mundane. I'm glad he does this as I don't have the patience or attention span to look at that many cars.

Other writers send us stories. Some you see semi-regularly. Marc Sonnery becomes our eyes and ears for European events. Gregor Schulz and Lucio Celia also send us articles from Europe.

Here in America, Dom Miliano, Steve Kittrell and Wallace Wyss are published often. Then we get random submissions from subscribers, like Enrique Senior and David Wheeler. There are others who have an interesting story to tell, or event they have been to, and want to share their experience. We relish each one because it makes our job easier.

Filling three, four or even five pages every two weeks is harder than you think. Having a human interest story in the tank allows us to pull it out when the creative juices run low. Hint, hint.

While reflecting upon the previous six years I remembered I had written articles for the Ferrari Market Letter long before I ever thought I would become a significant member of the team.

Back in 1990 I wrote several Tech-Tip articles. It was a recurring section on maintenance and covered diverse items as battery replacement, brake hose problems and other simple items an owner might need to know about their Ferrari.

I wrote about an oil hose recall on the 328/Mondial cars. Nothing rolls, or rotates, without the help of a bearing and that was the gist of another article. There was also a two-part series on hardware; talk about getting down to the nuts and bolts of a Ferrari!

Much later in 2007 after I started to work for Gerald, I was able to publish a ground breaking article, Untangling the Tangled Web, that chronicled the convoluted histories of four 375 MMs that had the serial numbers swapped at birth. That research has become the accepted story of how it occurred.

I often joke, if my seventh grade English teacher knew I write for a living today she would not believe it. I can take most manuscripts and edit them to make any story sound good. So don't be shy about not being a good writer.

The point is, we can publish just about anything when it comes to Ferrari. If you have something you would like to share with at least one person (me!) and wouldn't mind if thousands of others also got to enjoy, please by all means, drop me a line.

The Evolution of Our Species By Bill Orth

Like Darwin's observations of living things, we can see a progressive development of the genus Ferrari as it adapted to changing environments over time.

Most notable, of course, is the steady advance of dynamic technologies that have brought us from the 125 S to the LaFerrari. But everybody knows that, so let's look at a subspecies, the Restaurata Ferrari.

Historic literature reveals that in the 1950s and 1960s alteration of the cars was commonplace. Engines were routinely swapped amongst the factory racing cars and iconoclast owners put Chevrolet V8s into pontoon Testa Rossas at the drop of a hat. Crashed coupes were rebodied as roadsters, or vice-versa, and a SWB became the Breadvan.

If an owner didn't like the color of a street model, he changed it with little thought to any future consequence, and as more Ferraris joined the population, more adaptations took place.

Bumpers were added or removed; three carburetors might mutate into six and open headlights occasionally grew Plexiglas covers!

275 GTB with modified spoiler, taillights & bumpers

By the time I started splicing the genes of my own cars in the early 1970s, practicalities had made certain changes predictable, like troublesome Marelli generators being replaced by easily-available (and cheap!) Motorola alternators.

If the exhaust system rusted apart, a local muffler shop could weld up a counterfeit copy and who cared about original-equipment-style hoses or Cheney clamps? When the turn-and-push ignition switch burned up its contacts, NAPA had a universal one that fit the hole in the dash. Ditto for cam cover nuts that had gotten corroded; the local Volvo dealer had near-identical cad-plated ones for about 12 cents apiece. I bought dozens of them.

But about that time of anything-goes, visionaries at FAF Motorcars began to offer replacement parts that were less generic and more Ferrari-centric. They put together things like kits to rebuild your original FISPA mechanical fuel pump instead of having to use a universal electric pump...and then a pressure regulator after the fire was out.

At the 1981 FCA National Meet in Ashville, NC, I observed that clean and functional wasn't good enough anymore, and judges were starting to decree whether something was 'original', or not.

Within a few years, Ed Gilbertson founded the International Advisory Council for the Preservation of the Ferrari Automobile (IAC/PFA) as a way to standardize how Ferraris would be judged, based on originality.

The global Ferrari concours environment was changed dramatically and appreciation for originality spread to most of the other marques in the collector car jungle. But natural selection takes time, and many Ferrari owners were still content with ad hoc refurbishments of their cars with only casual concern about 'correctness.'

The majority of restorations on Ferraris were still in the personal preference stage; green and blue cars were routinely painted red, air filter tops were chromed and what was expeditious often trumped originality.

Once Ed's cataclysmic New World (Judging) Order took root, FCA-affiliated concours events focused on keeping the species' DNA as pure as possible and discouraged those that had mutated.

Professional Ferrari restorers began to devote considerable research into what was correct for the cars under their care, supported by gurus such as Gerald Roush and Marcel Massini, who as historians, traced the cars' backgrounds and the helixes of their make up.

Thirty years ago, very few restorers took the time to research the Ferraris they were doing or attended international-level shows to further their knowledge about what was 'right.'

Most paint and trim decisions were simply based on the car's owner or shop manager's preference with scant attention to authenticity. But as the IAC/PFA protocols became accepted and were recognized as a value-add, Ferrari owners began favoring the better-educated restorers.

Of course, not all Ferrari buffs are interested in concours events and initially shrugged off nit-picking comments about their cars' shortcomings. But when they wanted to sell their cars, even to other non-show-oriented buyers, the message was becoming clear, if it isn't correct, it's worth less than one that is.

What was once a rarely thought-about aspect of Ferrari restoration, authenticity, became more universally appreciated. Actually, digging into the background of their Ferraris became an enjoyable adjunct to enjoying it dynamically, and many owners have embraced returning their cars to original specification, helped along with annual critiques by the IAC/PFA judges when their cars are shown.

As in all things, the effect trickled down from the iconic alpha models to the betas of the tribe. A Superfast was quickly expected to be true to its roots, but a 308 could get away with aftermarket wheels for a while.

Over the past fifteen years, judging credentials have been shown to enhance a Ferrari's value; an award-winner conveys a sense of security that the car is less of a gamble and will be chosen over a similar car lacking of official endorsement.

Consequently, a Platinum-level car is worth more than one awarded Silver in most buyers' eyes and is usually easier to sell, too. It's not too hard to bring a never-evaluated-but-pretty-good car up to Silver status, and then striving for Gold next year. Platinum is tough; like raising a B to an A in your advanced chemistry class, but nevertheless is achieved by many.

In fact, the long-held IAC/PFA Platino standard of 95 points became so frequently-won, that the threshold was raised to 97 points in 2016!

It looks like Darwin was right; every species, even Restaurata Ferrari, adapts to the changing realities of its environment!

Museo Maranello and Museo Modena Exhibitions

Summertime with its sunshine and long days makes me think of vacation. Travel and visits to new places often mean acting like a tourist. Whenever I go someplace and have free time, I look for interesting places.

If you find yourself in Italy and near Modena or Maranello both Ferrari museums should be on your list.

Museo Enzo Ferrari is in Modena and Museo Ferrari Maranello is in, well, Maranello.

The following exhibitions are currently being displayed. Photos and text are from Ferrari.

Timeless Masterpieces

Can design ever be ‘timeless’? Can designers ever work outside the constraints of their moment in history to create objects which defy the unpredictable currents of fashion and taste?

Anything that is made reveals the beliefs, fears, hopes and preoccupations of the people who made it.

The designer invests objects with meaning so that they might be interpreted by consumers.

Where does Ferrari sit in the history of design?

In one reading, design gives aesthetic value to ordinary objects. At the same time, throughout the last century, designers aimed to democratize luxury.

Of course, there is little ordinary or democratic about Ferrari. And that is how it should be. A Ferrari must be exceptional.

But Ferrari is also the most superlative example of how a car can become an object of enduring beauty. And beauty must always be rare and exclusive. This is one of the great paradoxes of aesthetics and the quest for beauty: if everything were beautiful, nothing would be.

Design is not one subject, but several. Frank Lloyd Wright thought it was about making the most of contemporary possibilities.

To the architect Le Corbusier, it was “intelligence made visible”. Meanwhile, Apple’s Jony Ive says design is about reaching the “local maximum” where perfection is achieved and you simply cannot make better use of materials.

But design inevitably reflects what philosophers call the spirit-of-the-age.

A Savoia-Marchetti flying boat was a brave aeronautical experiment - on the edge of knowledge - that taught architects a lesson in economy-of-means and functionalism.

Then, during the ricostruzione, Vico Magistretti and Enzo Mari were among the designers who gave artistic value to mere household appliances. Today, the refined minimalism of Apple is a response to our dematerialized culture where intangible data is more valuable than solid objects.

Design is not ‘art’. Or not quite. Our notion of art demands the existence of a single auteur, but the most compelling cultural forms of our age are design, pop music and the cinema.

Each is collaborative: perhaps the greatest film ever made was Michael Curtiz’ ‘Casablanca’ and it had six writers, not an individual author. Meanwhile, the creation of a car involves hundreds of specialists.

But in the way that design expresses collective yearnings, in the way it teaches the public to enjoy meaningful form and to understand the beauty of proportions and details, in the way it demands reading and interpretation...in the way it creates a visual language, design has usurped the traditional roles of painting and sculpture.

One test for the presence of art is to ask whether an object yields something to contemplation, whether it means more than its surface appearance. Look at any Ferrari; something has given meaningful life to base materials.

Was it magic? Perhaps design is supernatural, as Barthes might say. Perhaps real masterpieces of design are truly immortal...if not necessarily timeless.

Hypercars - The evolution of uniqueness

The Maranello Museum is staging the glorious “Hypercars” exhibition dedicated to all the Ferraris that hailed landmark advances in the marque’s technological evolution.

Every Ferrari is special and the preserve of the few who become our clients. But certain Prancing Horse models have been so molded by our thirst for innovation and accelerated technological progress that they have set new benchmarks in the sector.

This is the Maranello signature when it comes to its Hypercars, a term that refers to milestones in motoring history. These cars are all limited series and the product of Enzo Ferrari’s personal philosophy of aiming to make every new model the best car of its day.

The result is that each new, more advanced addition is the embodiment of genuinely leading-edge research, setting the benchmark for all cars worldwide.

The Hypercars exhibition now offers visitors the opportunity to see these examples of technological excellence first-hand: GTO, F40, F50, Ferrari Enzo, LaFerrari.

Also making its public debut is the design static model of the Ferrari P80/C, the latest product of our One-Off program which allows owners to create a truly unique Ferrari of an existing model, molded around their personal wishes.

As part of the journey through Ferrari's signature exclusivity, visitors also discover the Tailor Made program through which the marque gives full expression to its luxe soul.

90 Years - Scuderia Ferrari, the complete history

It is one of the great iconic names in motorsport with the power to unite an entire country and a million tifosi from all over the world behind it: the Scuderia Ferrari, the most successful team in the history of Formula 1, turns 90 in 2019. An anniversary that the Ferrari Museum in Maranello has decided to mark with a major celebratory exhibition.

The cars featured in the "90 Years" exhibition are a testament to that glorious history, starting with the Alfa Romeo 8C 2300 Spider, which, in 1932, became the very first car to sport the Prancing Horse as part of its livery, and going all the way to the SF71H, the single-seater Sebastian Vettel and Kimi Räikkönen raced last season.

In the exhibition, the timeframe separating those two cars is illustrated by a string of unforgettable single-seaters, the stars of hard-fought races, historic victories and sometimes crushing defeats.

All of these cars brilliantly encapsulate and epitomize Enzo Ferrari's dream, and the commitment, determination and passion for innovation of the most successful team in the history of Formula 1. Its tally of 31 World titles (15 Drivers' and 16 Constructors') is an unequalled record that the Maranello team continues to defend and honor each season with the same passion as 90 years ago.

The exhibition pays homage of course also to Ferrari victories in enclosed wheel racing.

1989 Ferrari 328 GTS, VIN ZFFXA20A1K0080610

105 original miles from new! Completely original, as delivered new. This U.S. model Ferrari was purchased new at the authorized, official Ferrari agent, Kessler Motors, in New York, on June 16, 1989. It had 99 delivery miles from the Ferrari Factory prior to its purchase. Over the next 30 years, it would be driven only an additional 6 miles. The additional mileage was added during a full and complete service including timing belts in 2012 and again in May of this year. This Ferrari is likely the single most original, lowest mileage example in the world. It is sold with all of the original items that accompanied it from new, including full books, record and tools.

There simply is no finer example anywhere nor will there ever be again.

THE COBRA-FERRARI WARS 1963-1965, 2nd edition. Signed by the author. The true story of the great GT car battles of the 1960s and the "men who made the adventure possible". From the book [Fred Gamble]: "We really didn't have the money to go to Europe, but new roadsters were already budgeted, as were three coupes. So we figured we could send a small team if John Wyer could help out. I didn't have to pay for Wyer because FAV was funded out of another budget, so we had that option. But even with that, it had to be a very small effort." You can specify red or blue cloth cover (under the dustcover). $49.95 includes shipping within the U.S. 4416 cobraferrariwars.com or PayPal michaelshoen@rocketmail.com (AZ)
