

Pilgrimage By Dom Miliano

The flight from Newark International Airport to Milan's Malpensa Airport is a good eight hours. Since the personal TV screen at my seat was dead (thanks, United), I had to pass the time thinking about my trip to Italy's Emilia Romagna – home of our beloved Ferrari.

The word “pilgrimage” kept creeping into my conscientiousness. Wikipedia calls a pilgrimage: “A journey, often into an unknown or foreign place, where a person goes in search of new or expanded meaning about the self, others, nature, or a higher good, through the experience. It can lead to a personal transformation, after which the pilgrim returns to their daily life.”

It had been nearly 20 years since my last visit to the Ferrari factory so the concept of making this a personal pilgrimage began to take form.

The drive from the airport to Maranello takes about two and a half hours along some rather boring Autostrade. You could wander on smaller roads and see more of the scenery of the area, but if you, like me, are anxious to dive into a total Ferrari experience, the (expensive) toll roads get you there quicker.

Our choice of hotel was the first good decision we made. Our home base, the Disney-like Maranello Village complex (Viale Terra delle Rosse, 12 | 41053 Maranello MO) was a brief drive to Maranello and Modena (Enzo's home) and was dripping in Ferrari cool.

Originally built as a residence for Ferrari employees and their families, it now offers several Ferrari-themed chalets you can rent at very affordable prices.

An added plus, the buildings are named after famous races: Suzuka, Daytona, Monza and Le Mans. When you walk in, there's a full-sized Ferrari F1 car, circa 2011, in the lobby and, of course, the ubiquitous gift shop!

At check-in I was told that for an added 10€, we can have breakfast in their dining area. For convenience, I said OK, but sorry to report, it's nothing special. There is, however, a genuine Ferrari engine in the sun-lit breakfast room so they have that going for them, which is nice.

Our room was a small apartment with a master and guest bedroom, full sized bath with washing machine and a complete kitchen. If you travel with car friends or your family, staying here is surprisingly affordable. Parking was included (a plus for sure) and if you rented something better than the FIAT 500X we had, they even have free secure garage parking.

Half of the fun for me on a trip to Italy is eating good food. Italians know that the best food is what's produced in the area that's fresh and in season. I like to go with recommendations from locals so it came as a surprise the Maranello Village urged us to try a restaurant on their property called Ristorante Paddock.

Since we were jet-lagged and didn't want to drive far, we walked across the parking lot with low expectations. I guessed it would be a kitschy “NASCAR-like” eatery serving car-themed menu items (I imagined dishes like Race-a-Roni Risotto and Pit-stop-Pasta). Wow was I wrong!

This proved to be a serious restaurant serving well-prepared dishes. My friend and I had to literally eat our words as we devoured course after course of flavorful offerings.

We had done our homework ahead of time so our itinerary was well planned. On our first full day, we drove to Modena and the Enzo Ferrari Museum.

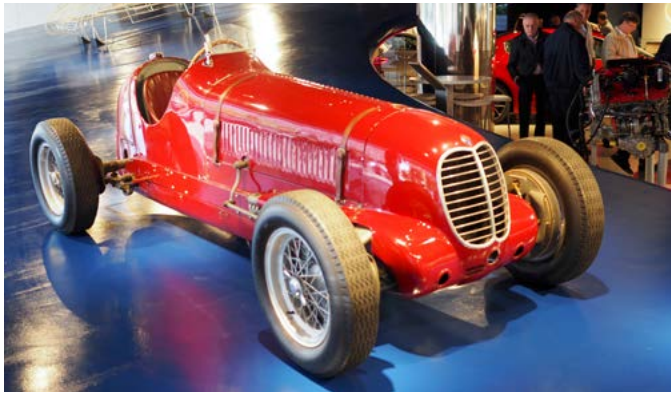

Modena was Enzo's home and under a vast yellow tent-like dome is a collection of important cars inspired by his genius. While we were there, they showed an informative movie, displayed on a building-wide panoramic screen, of exciting moments in Enzo's racing life.

Outside the museum they have a second building filled with engines from racecars, street Ferraris and even a couple of experimental prototypes. If you are an engine head, this is your place; be prepared to spend a lot of time getting up close and personal. Street parking is available and if you arrive early enough, there's a private lot too.

Across the street is a Maserati showroom with a few historic cars on display (including the tube-chassis from a Maserati Birdcage) as well as a chance to take a 90-minute factory tour. You do have to book ahead for the tour: factorytour@maserati.com.

We discovered another small but fascinating place (free to the public) called the Panini Motor Museum (Via Corletto Sud, 320 41126 MODENA). Here, among other cars and motorcycles, you will find historic Maseratis rescued by the Panini family from worldwide dispersion at auction. They offer guided tours in English and parking; both free. Highly recommended!

Just down the road from our hotel, we found the Promised Land: the Ferrari factory and Fiorano race-track. Crossing the overpass into town, we slowed and then parked on the shoulder to get a peek at cars being driven on the track. Sadly, unlike the last time I was here, FIA rules limit F1 practice so we only saw street Ferraris at speed, but it was still exciting.

In the center of town the iconic entrance to the factory still brings chills. I bet it's one of the most photographed spots in northern Italy.

Across the street is the famous (rightfully so) Ristorante Cavallino. Book early to get a seat! Back by the overpass at Fiorano is the Ristorante Montana; equally famous and decorated with lots of Ferrari memorabilia. The same booking rules apply here.

I have had dinner at both eateries so I tried a new-to-me place called Ristorante Retrò Gusto, literally a stone's throw from the center of town.

Upon recommendation from a local, we introduced ourselves to the chef and owner (believe it or not, named Enzo), told him who sent us there and he greeted us as old friends. My friend (braver than I) said, "Bring whatever you have – we'll love it. We trust you!"

Enzo asked about food allergies and then brought dish after dish of local specialties. For one pasta dish, (as we say in New Jersey, 'Ta die for') he sprinkled freshly ground Parmesan whispering as he did, "Thirty six months old".

After lunch, we went to Museo Ferrari; formerly called the Galleria. It's much larger than it was on my last visit and vastly improved. They have rotating exhibits of important Ferraris with English language placards telling the story of each car.

We were there for Hypercars exhibit so they were displaying cars from the 288 GTO (my personal favorite Ferrari) to the amazing LaFerrari. The non-rotating exhibits dip deeper into racing history with racecars hanging from the walls, a three-story glass case filled with trophies and life-sized photos of their GP champions. Thrilling.

We booked a bus tour that took us behind the guarded gates of the F1 works and into the grounds of the factory. We toured on Sunday so we didn't experience any hustle and bustle on the grounds, but we did see a few cars poised for their shakedown drive prior to delivery and the iconic wind tunnel.

I was expecting a better experience; we were not allowed on the Fiorano track. They claim the bus's weight would damage the racing surface. It's not expensive so you probably want to take a shot but keep your expectations low!

We did a couple of side trips worth noting. First, we drove to the small Lamborghini museum, called the Museum of Technology (Via Modena, 12 40019 Sant'Agata Bolognese). Two floors of interesting cars can be entertaining for an hour or so but the factory tour is why you want to visit.

As with other attractions, you need to book early to get the day and time preferred: (<https://www.ticketland-ia.com/m/event/museo-lamborghini-visita-guidata-en>).

Finally, no trip to the area is complete without a visit to the new and vastly improved Alfa Romeo museum in Arese (www.museoalfaromeo.com). The old museum was wonderful but seemed neglected.

The day I went in 2001 it was practically devoid of visitors! Today's museum is bigger, better and more exciting with more cars and interactive displays. Personally I found it more impressive than the new Ferrari museum (Shhhh!).

Our pilgrimage only lasted a week but I thoroughly enjoyed every minute. My friend and I didn't take trains to get around; instead we rented (what else) a FIAT 500X and found it more than adequate for the cut and thrust of local Italian byways.

Even more important, prices for hotels, food and museum admissions were unexpectedly affordable. If you don't hit the Ferrari gift shops too hard (in Maranello, they sell 45€ hats!) you should come back with your credit card relatively free of stress, a camera full of pictures and memories of food that will spoil you for most local Italian restaurants.

Why not start now to plan your own personal Ferrari pilgrimage. I think every Ferrari owner should go, "In search of a new or expanded meaning about self, others, nature, or a higher good..."

No One Accomplishes Anything Without the Help of Others

By Harold Lovinger

Around 40 years ago early 1980, on a suggestion from a good friend, Larry Cannon, who was a tech with FAF Motorcars, I came to Tucker, Georgia, to apply for a job in the parts department.

I had no real experience other than sourcing parts for American muscle cars from the 1970s, or helping my dad and Larry repair cars and sell them for a small profit; which we all split.

All of this happened after work hours and on the weekends. If I had the foresight to keep one or two of those cars, I may have shortened my tenure by about 20 years. Within this time I had made enough money to purchase my first home in Roswell, Georgia.

When the passion for cars gets in your blood, it stays there. I got offered the job and left behind my future career as an optician. I enjoyed what I was doing, but it just wasn't very exciting.

It's unbelievable to realize that I have worked for Ferrari of Atlanta for 39 ½ years.

I did leave for a short period at the urging of a friend who owned another car dealership in town. It didn't take however, and I was asked to come back to Ferrari of Atlanta which I gladly accepted. With all of the extra hours spent working I can say that I have close to a 40 year tenure with the Ferrari brand.

The early days of FAF were very interesting. It was like we were a mail order catalog supporting a car dealership.

I started out just like everyone else...packing and shipping orders all over the country and even to places overseas.

My early influences were Jim Weed, Steve Kellett, Ted Rutland, Serio Sartor, Steve Ahlgrim, Terry Gironi, and Ken Erwin to name a few.

The Hunter and Apen families owned the dealership and our FAF catalog was the focus of our world in parts. I guess you could say we were similar to the internet before there was an internet.

I think about three years passed before Kellett and Weed let me have a shot at talking to customers on the phone. They pushed me hard to study the catalogs, do research in the dealership, and learn as much as I could about Ferrari.

All we needed back then was a phone that had a cord attached to it, which is quite different today.

Looking back we were just doing a job that was fun to us; we didn't realize the impact we had on the Ferrari world. We became a lifeline for parts and service to people all over the world and helped them maintain their Ferraris.

To this day I still receive calls from people referencing the FAF catalog.

Year after year we continued to grow as a company. It was common to see a 250 SWB, 250 GTE, 275 GTB/4, 330 GTC, and Daytona around the dealership.

We were a factory-authorized Ferrari dealer but a lot of people did not think that, probably because we were doing something different than the norm.

From the early days of the Ferrari network, with the help of Livio Ramani at Algar to present day, we all collectively help each other in solving issues for our customers.

In the mid 1990s the dealership was purchased by the Ed Wettach family of Jackson, Mississippi. There was a change coming from corporate and the dealership needed to be relocated to our current location in Roswell, Georgia.

At that point everyone who worked at the dealership either made the choice to move on from the company or reapply for their position.

The migration from Tucker to Roswell included myself, Hugh Steward the GM, Wade Williams, and Ken Erwin along with a few others. After relocating, we became more of a "traditional" car dealership; moving away from catalog sales and focusing more on the cars in our service department.

It has been an incredible journey with Ferrari over the years. Some highlights of mine have been visiting the Ferrari factory for their annual parts manager meeting. While there, I could really see the passion that goes into every car they build. Thanks, Enzo Francesconi!

We have made great strides as a dealer. Under the current guidance of Webb Collums, Will Campbell, Craig Forbes, and Matt Luckie, we have pushed through and been awarded Top Ferrari Service Department Worldwide in 2018.

Everyone at the dealership helped in obtaining this very prestigious award. As I said in the beginning, no matter what your journey in life is, there are people that help you and guide you along the way.

The early days helped mold my character and taught me to continually strive for excellence.

Just like in any family, we have lost people along the way. Ed Wettach, Ken Erwin, Ted Rutland and Larry Cannon are all in car heaven where I am sure there is no such thing as a backordered part.

I have full confidence handing over the department to the "younger guys": Phil, Ivano, Felipe, and Luke. I believe that they will carry on just fine.

I want to say thank you to everyone I have met along the way. Some of you were kids coming into FAF; buying books and learning about the cars.

Now, you come in with your own kids and pass on the love of Ferrari to them.

To my mom and dad: I did get to go the Ferrari factory! I'm sorry I couldn't tell you both about it.

My biggest thank you, however, goes to my wife for putting up with me over the years and all of the nights I came home late; I really was at work!

I'm not sure what my next steps are in life, but just like the past 40 years, I know that it will be active. It's is not in my nature to slow down or "take it easy."

TWO NEW BOOKS JUST IN TIME FOR CHRISTMAS

312 P - One of Ferrari's most beautiful racers

With racing cars being built mainly for performance, only few of them combine this with admirable beauty. Ferrari's model 312 P is definitely such an example - thanks to the work of its designers Giacomo Caliri and Edmondo Casoli, but also Enzo Ferrari, who tried to stop the team adding wings or other aerodynamic additions to its beauty - even if they might have improved the car's performance.

The 312 P was built for the 1969 World Sportscar Championship and powered by a stunning 3-litre V12 engine. A short development period and a small budget led to a season of mixed results where, except in Monza and at Le Mans, only one car was sent to the races to take on all the other teams. Its official career ended when the bigger 5-litre 512 S came for the 1970 season to fight the Porsche 917s.

This book by Gianni Agnesa tells the story of the car - of which only three examples were built - in every detail, from the very first test, through every race with the factory team or later when the North American Racing Team took over the cars. It gives short portraits of the drivers of the 312 P, such as Chris Amon, Mario Andretti, Pedro Rodriguez, Peter Schetty, Mike Parkes, Tony Adamowicz, Chuck Parsons and Sam Posey. The 264-page volume takes us to today and the one example that is still used on some historic events.

The large-format, high quality book produced by McKlein comes in a slipcase and is illustrated by many previously unseen images.

Sharknose V6 - Ferrari 156, Ferrari 246SP & Ferrari 196SP

The story of the "Sharknose" mid-engined Ferrari is full of glamor and drama. Outstanding achievements, such as winning the Formula 1 World Championship in 1961 by the American Phil Hill, go hand in hand with deep abysses such as the death of Wolfgang von Trips and 15 spectators at the 1961 Italian Grand Prix in Monza. Newcomer Giancarlo Baghetti, however, with three victories in his first three Formula 1 races, including the World Cup race in Reims, forever in history.

Even the sporting decline in 1962, after the glorious year before with seven Formula 1 victories, is pure drama. Constant interventions by Enzo Ferrari's wife Laura into the team chase Carlo Chiti's entire management team of Scuderia to flight and leave the 26-year-old Mauro Forghieri the difficult task of technically continuing the team. Forghieri rises in a row to one of the great figures in motorsport.

While the Monoposto 156, an icon of Formula 1, designed in an irresistible manner by Fantuzzi, is a legend, the sports prototypes it also features, with their low weight and aerodynamically optimized shape, have a lasting influence on the development of two-seater racing cars in the coming years. And they celebrate successes at the Targa Florio, at the Nürburgring and at the European Mountain Championships.

This book, with many unpublished motifs by the great Bernard Cahier, paints a detailed picture of one of motor racing's most exciting epochs and some of its greatest icons: the Ferrari 156 and its prototype brothers, the 246SP and the 196SP.

Publisher: McKlein Publishing.

Authors: Jörg-Thomas Födisch & Rainer Rossbach.

Preface: Mauro Forghieri.

Format: 29 x 29 cm, hardcover in slipcase, 432 pages, 75 color and 353 black and white pictures and graphics.
