

Repository of Data By Jim Weed

The Ferrari Market Letter has been collecting information about Ferraris for nearly fifty years. Founder Gerald Roush began recording serial number data from advertisements, Road and Track, Ferrari meets and any other source he could find.

Up to 1972 total Ferrari production numbers were less than 10,000 cars. The task to identify, locate and develop a historical archive of each individual car didn't seem like an impossible task.

The recording of each sighting was dutifully typed onto a 5x7 index card and filed. Information on ownership, colors and mileage was collected. The archival retrieval system consisted of remembering who owned which car, what it looked like and other particulars from directly examining each one.

A file cabinet held letters, photos and magazine articles cut from various sources. Each folder labeled with the serial number and filed away.

While working with the Ferrari club and a new company in Atlanta called FAF Motorcars the concept of providing a newsletter of Ferraris for sale throughout the United States was born. This would allow the gathering of even more information to be placed upon the ever growing stack of 5x7 cards.

Fortunately the 5x7 cards are gone. The data has been accurately transcribed into an electronic database with all the capability to sort, find and track an ever-growing amount of information.

Today we still add to that database. In addition, the ability to scan documents has greatly expanded. What used to be put on a copy machine can now be saved with a color scanner in great detail nearly as good as the original document.

In today's world we save information on each Ferrari made in the electronic database, in paper file cabinets (that now number 10 four-drawer over-stuffed cabinets) and in what we call photo files.

Photo files are by serial number and contain scans of photos, letters and any other information collected. Many times customers send us photos of their car or we take photos at various events. These are saved to be able to provide a recorded history of each Ferrari.

Often, we get calls inquiring about the history of a Ferrari or to see if we have any paperwork that we could provide. We have much, but not all of the history of every Ferrari made.

Ferrari has made roughly 190,000 Ferraris (if every serial number is used) since 1948. With production pushing 10,000 cars each year and possibly even more soon, that adds up to a lot of history to track.

This brings me to one call I received recently. The gentleman was looking for the history on his late model Ferrari. It seems he purchased the car several years earlier and his house, garage and business, along with all paperwork, was consumed in the California wildfires.

What was left of his garage exposed the skeleton of what once was a cherished car collection. Thank goodness for insurance; but wait, the insurance company wanted the client to prove he owned the Ferrari.

It seems he purchased the car and never transferred the title into his name. A classic 'open title' situation. No title transfer, no taxes paid, no tag, no proof of ownership, other than the now non-existent bill of sale...

Could we tell him who the original owner was?

We had nothing. We knew the serial number was a legitimate USA Ferrari, but nothing past that. The original owner didn't let us know he owned the car.

That owner never took the car to any show or meet where it could have bounced off our radar.

In addition, the now-desperate new owner never let us know he had purchased the car. Since it spent its life hidden away in the garage, and again, not driven to shows and events, we never had the opportunity to record who the owner was.

Somewhere, in another state, the DMV has a title in an unknown man's name. As long as the original owner can be found and he applies for a replacement title, signs the new title and forwards it, it should be a snap to get the insurance company to pay for the now crispy Ferrari.

Provided the name can be found, and he is still alive, the transaction should be easy. Add in a deceased owner and the family may not be easy to deal with; the headache and cost could rapidly rise. A lot can happen in the eight years since the purchase.

The moral of the story is: if you don't tell me you own the car and who you bought it from, how can I record that information to be able to give it back to you later?

What if he had dropped me an e-mail? What about sending me a scan of his title, even the one he didn't transfer? I could have regurgitated that information back to him.

The Ferrari Market Letter has collected information on as many Ferraris as we can, but you could help also. We have been the Repository of Data for nearly fifty years, a trusted source of information. Why not yours?

Recently, I got an entire PDF of sales receipts, titles and letters from a late-fifties Ferrari. Much of this information was known to us, but not all, details matter. Now we can record the pages into the photo files and help complete the known history.

Although I don't have the physical paper, I have the next best thing, a quality scan of the original. If something were to happen to the original file, say, a fire, flood or other unfortunate event, it could be reproduced from our archived files.

The scans are coded with the serial number and date, then a description of the image and the source. When placed into the folder all the scans sort in chronological order. This helps us create a picture history of each car.

We have gotten boxes of records from dealers who have gone out of business. Parts receipts and workorders are most common. Sometimes there have been sales receipts and checks. All are scanned and filed under an identifiable serial number. It still surprises me when I file a workorder and recognize my handwriting either under the parts column or in the service performed area.

Often a workorder can fill in missing information; owners name and mileage are a couple of areas that generate an entry into the electronic database, but there can be other tidbits found. License numbers help to identify photos and there are always engine internal numbers to collect.

Verifying mileage is a big question we often get. A good verifiable mileage history helps value and workorders help to establish that progression over time. What better way to be able to prove service on your Ferrari than to send a scan of your workorder to the Ferrari Market Letter? When you go to sell your car and can't find all those pieces of paper, we will have the scans to send back to you.

Another area the scans can help is in identifying unknown Ferraris. I have been able to compare photographs against other known data to uncover mis-information. There was an entry in our racing database indicating a certain Vignale berlinetta participated at a particular race. Upon finding a photograph from that race it clearly showed the Ferrari in question was Touring bodied. It was a short investigation to reveal what serial number was really raced that day. History corrected.

Recently I found a photo of a Spyder California in race trim, unidentified. It was easy to find another photo of the car from a later race by matching details like the shape of the roll bar and decals. Sometimes even a dent in the nose can be used for positive identification.

In addition to the aforementioned data repositories we also have other database lists. The assembly data sheets that formerly could be requested from Ferrari but now can be part of the Classiche Certification package are in a Excel spreadsheet. Did you know the basic 3-liter 250 GT engine came in three levels of tune?

There is the normal street version with all stock parts. Then there is a customer high-performance version, most would call their 250 GT SWB to have a 'Competition' engine. Ferrari held back from the customers; he had another even higher performance engine that was used only by the factory or very deserving customers. These engines had components that the normal customer could not get.

This info comes though detailed analysis of many, many build sheets. Do we have a copy of yours?

Between Cathy and me, we spend nearly forty hours each week in the database. Whether it is auction reports, advertisements, sorting through old photographs, e-mails or old files we fill each and every day. In between we organize, produce and mail the Ferrari Market Letter to you.

Often, there seems to be a reluctance to give us information. The broker who calls with an inquiry, "What history can you give me on this car?" We ask "What do know about it? Where is it? Who owns it now?" The usual answer is "I don't know any of that, tell me what you have." Information is a two-way street. We are not going to take your 'secret' information and publish it in the next issue. Our integrity is higher than that.

I have a broker that sends me every car he sells, every car he knows that has changed hands, serial number, mileage, often photos. He has built up a credit he taps into every time he needs to. How great it would be if everybody did the same?

Sometimes it's funny to be known for collecting information of Ferraris. When disputes arise or there are questions about any Ferrari, the phone lights up and desperate voices want to know if we have any information that can save the situation.

Why is that? The short answer is our honesty and integrity have been built up during fifty years of collecting information. If you supply confidential information we will keep it confidential. It is a big responsibility to be the Repository of Data. As Cathy and I say to each other all the time, if not the Ferrari Market Letter then who else?

My inbox is always open. Send scans of your paperwork and photos to:

Is your Ferrari under a Recall Notice?

By Jim Weed

The Takata air bag has a nasty tendency to erupt with such force as to break the retainer and send shards of metal into the passenger compartment.

If that statement sounds a little scary, it should. Air bag deployment is so quick you don't have time to even blink. The life-saving quality of an air bag requires fast deployment to arrest the bodies' forward momentum when the vehicle it is riding in comes to a rapid stop.

For the scientifically inclined this is known as Newton's first law of motion. A body in motion tends to stay in motion.

Many manufacturers used the Takata air bag and I highly recommend you make sure your daily, and even your semi-weekly automobile air bag has been replaced. Ferrari has also used the Takata air bag and they are under recall.

A recall is issued when a manufacturer or NHTSA determines that a vehicle, equipment, car seat, or tire creates an unreasonable safety risk or fails to meet minimum safety standards. Most decisions to conduct a recall and remedy a safety defect are made voluntarily by manufacturers prior to any involvement by NHTSA.

Manufacturers are required to fix the problem by repairing it, replacing it, offering a refund, or in rare cases repurchasing the vehicle. (NHTSA website)

There are a few things you should know about recalls in general. Because the recall has made it up the chain to the Federal Government level and the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) is involved, recalls must be performed.

Let's say 100 (or 100,000) vehicles have been determined to need a recall. The government and the manufacturer have identified the exact vehicles that need to be updated. Serial numbers are exchanged and the search for those specific vehicles begins.

The manufacturer sends notices to the original owners to request a no-cost repair. If the owner still has the car and takes it to a dealer, any dealer, it will be repaired at no charge.

If the car has been sold, the original owner rarely tracks down the next owner to notify him of the defect. So many vehicles fall through the cracks.

Unfortunately the manufacturer may not know who subsequent owners are and those cars become difficult to find. Meanwhile the NHTSA still wants every vehicle repaired. Not most of them, but each and every one.

Federal recall campaigns never end. Only upon the verification of every vehicle being fixed can a recall be retired. The manufacturer is required to provide a cost-free repair for at least ten years. Often they will repair at no-charge for longer.

All recalls are important and should be performed. Whether it is an air bag or other component, take the time and check with a dealer to verify your Ferrari is up to date. Not all recalls can injure or maim you or those dear to you, but why take the chance?

Be safe out there.

365 GTB/4 SPYDER CONVERSION, S/N 12815 (1969 Euro. prod.). Rosso corsa with black interior and red Daytona inserts. Borrani wire wheels. A European car most of its life, delivered new in Italy to racing team owner Corrado Manfredini. The second owner registered the car in Monaco, and the third owner was a prominent collector in Italy. I am the fourth owner and imported to the US in 2006. Spyder conversion was completed in Europe in the 1970s and was properly and accurately executed. The car still features its Italian libretto registration in the window. Meticulously maintained by Fast Cars in Redondo Beach, CA for the past 10 years and is mechanically excellent. Body and paint are great with a new interior installed in 2006 that is still like new. This is a truly reliable, non-needy car that starts every time, no accidents. 54,000 km (less than 34,000 miles). $695,000. 4307

THE COBRA-FERRARI WARS 1963-1965, 2nd edition. Signed by the author. The cars and the men who made road racing history, 368 pages and 530 archival photos and drawings. From the book (Dan Gurney): "Daytona was the first time any of us had seen the new GTO and we had no idea how fast it was going to be. From the standpoint of how pretty the car was, I would say it looked great. It was a more pleasing-appearing car. Whether they could do it with the size engine they had remained to be seen. Back then, I don't think any of us were aware of aerodynamics as we are now. We knew enough to tilt the windshield back on the roadster, but that's where it ended." $49.95 includes shipping in the U.S. 4308
