

Ford v Ferrari: the movie, and the rest of the story By Jim Weed

If you haven't seen it yet, you must go. Like most movies that represent true events the movie does a good job setting the stage for an epic battle at Le Mans in 1966.

The movie accurately portrays the Ford point of view. The early 1960s was a time of covert racing by the Big Three manufacturers. There had been an agreement between Ford, General Motors and Chrysler to not be directly involved in racing.

For several years all three did abide by the gentleman's agreement but the horsepower war was about to heat up as the new decade dawned.

Racing in America consisted of mainly drag racing in which maximum horsepower was needed and the oval dirt tracks that dotted the landscape where jalopies could battle on Saturday night. Stock car racing was mainly a southern thing.

The one thing they all had in common was the maker of the car that came in first experienced a bump in sales. Hence, the "Win on Sunday, sell on Monday" saying. The manufacturers were not going to just sit on the sidelines and hope their car was going to win.

Engineering departments were designing higher performing parts and engines. These would be sold (given?) to a selected few racing teams and through these teams Ford, General Motors and Chrysler could 'help' Monday sales without being directly involved in racing.

It didn't take long before the surreptitious actions became full blown acceptance of factory help in providing parts and engineering help to win races.

Ford was looking for an edge. Ferrari seemed to have the technology to provide the best in racing automobiles. Ferrari was winning races all around the world, and Ford took notice. It happened that Ferrari might sell and Ford was a willing buyer.

The movie portrays the story fairly true to form. The negotiations were intense and it did come down to a signature on the contract. Ferrari was not going to give the power of funding his racing to Detroit and walked away from the deal.

The head of Fiat, Giovanni "Gianni" Agnelli, did ultimately buy into Ferrari but not with the timely phone call as depicted in the movie. A bit of poetic license here, but it did happen two years later.

Once the movie gets to this point the stage is set. Henry Ford II is hurt to be treated so roughshod by Ferrari. How dare a small company like Ferrari refuse the might and power of a company as large as Ford.

If Ford can't buy Ferrari then by God, Ford will beat them at their own game and the place to do that will be Le Mans. Where could Ford buy the expertise and knowledge necessary to put a race team together?

Enter Carroll Shelby. He was building Cobras in California and the cars were creating a good record of wins in sports car racing circles. Shelby, played by Matt Damon, is a struggling car constructor when Ford executives come to recruit him into the racing program.

Shelby brings Ken Miles, played by Christian Bale, into the fold as a development driver and the stage is set. Trials and tribulations abound as the two work with, and against, the Ford company bureaucracy.

The big showdown is the 1966 Le Mans. Of course, we know who wins and the story is a bit of fantasy as the cars grid up and the race begins.

I was hoping to see real Ferraris, vintage footage, and maybe a bit less Hollywood, but it was not to be. The Ferraris were clearly mockups with no inner structure when viewed in the frontal shots. At one point the rear lid is opened on one of the cars in the pits. Not a single Ferrari in the race had the rear deck open like a Boxer. They do not clamshell hinge from the rear.

The drama on the track was a bit contrived but necessary to keep the story going. There were some light moments like Shelby liberating a couple of stopwatches from the Ferrari team. There was also a gratuitous stunt when Shelby tosses a lugnut onto the ground at the Ferrari pit and causes a lot of excitement.

Of course, Ferrari lugnuts are not five to a wheel. That is an old NASCAR trick, but the producers must have felt it needed to be added here.

The hero of the race is Ken Miles. It was his help in developing the GT40 to be a winner. It was his goal to win Le Mans. He had already won Daytona and Sebring; to win all three in the same year would have been a great achievement.

Miles did lead the pack across the finish line, but due to finagling between the Ford execs, a vendetta against Shelby and the race organizers Miles was not declared the winner. The photo finish allowed the second place car to close up on the leader. Miles had not traveled the most distance due to the second place car starting a little farther back on the grid.

I felt the movie could have been called The Ken Miles Story as it did a respectable service to this scrappy racer who was not only quick, regardless of the car, but was also technically capable of determining what a car needed to go fast.

Miles was killed driving shortly after Le Mans at Riverside while testing another GT40. The movie did not shy away from the contributions of Miles and the effect he had on his co-workers and family.

Was the movie worth seeing? Absolutely! Should you go to see the Ferraris? No, there weren't any. Unless you can count a pretty yellow 275 GTB quickly shown in the famous Ferrari courtyard when the Ford execs come to visit.

Ignore the fake Spyder California also in the same yard. Could they not find another real Ferrari to present? The racing cars were clearly mockups and so disappointing.

The story is good, the action believable, if a bit contrived, and the racing, well, it's not Gran Prix but it is tolerable. Matt Damon as Carroll Shelby, and Christian Bale as Ken Miles, were well cast.

The rest of the story...

So, Ford won Le Mans in 1966. The movie didn't really explain the attempts of the Ford Advanced Vehicles Division created after the breakdown of the Ferrari negotiations in 1963. The development was handed to England and over the next three years the results were disappointing.

It finally came together when Shelby and Miles could get better control of the development. In 1966 Ford won Daytona and Sebring and was on track to finally win Le Mans. Ford sunk several millions of dollars to make a point.

Ford supplied eight cars: three for the Shelby team; three for the Holman & Moody team; and two for Alan Mann Racing team. Ferrari brought two.

There were a total of thirteen Fords in the race as there were privateers running the older model. Ferrari had a total of fourteen cars. The Ferrari privateers were NART with five cars; Maranello Concessionaires and Ecurie Francorchamps with three each; and Scuderia Filipinetti with one.

Scuderia Ferrari had two 330 P3s.

S/N 0844: This car won its first race at the 1966 Monza 1000 km. In the Le Mans race it had transmission failure. Its next race was Ferrari's revenge at Daytona in 1967 when driven to a third place by Pedro Rodriguez and Jean Guichet (race #26) and was immortalized in the famous 1-2-3 photo finish designed to

The chaotic start of the 1966 Le Mans - Fords lead the way, the Ferraris are right behind thumb the nose at Ford.

This car would be turned into a 412 P Can-Am and used with poor results in the late 1967 season. Sold into private hands it was owned by Harley Cluxton III and Walt Medlin before being returned to its original configuration in 1998. Today it still can be seen at many historic races throughout Europe.

Race #21 S/N 0844 at Le Mans

S/N 0848: It appears this chassis was new for the 1966 Le Mans. Driven by Lodovico Scarfiotti and Michael Parks this was the only Ferrari to have an accident in the race. Ferrari sold this car to Scuderia Filipinetti where it had lackluster results in several races. It also failed to finish the 1967 Le Mans race. It did better in several hillclimbs.

It was gifted to Pierre Bardinon by Filipinetti. Sold to Switzerland in 1991, we have not seen this chassis but you can be sure it is still around.

The privateers brought a diverse group of racing cars to the fray. Dino 206 SPs (3), 275 GTB/Cs (3), and a lone 250 LM were brought by the NART, Maranello Concessionaires and Francorchamps teams. Each team had one of last year's Le Mans entries except NART who had also brought the newest P-car, besides the factory cars, which had competed in the 1966 Sebring race.

The 1965 Le Mans cars did not do well. The two Ferrari entries, S/N 0828 and S/N 0832, did not finish and were ultimately sold to Francorchamps and Filipinetti respectively.

S/N 0828 was sold at the end of its career and owned by Fabrizio Violati, most recently offered in 2015 by Talacrest.

S/N 0832 also was sold at the end of its career. Like most of these racers, life on the track is hard. This car was damaged in Nassau but has been restored to new and lives a comfortable life in the USA.

The other two 1965 Le Mans cars were S/N 0826 and S/N 0838. Each campaigned by Maranello Concessionaires and NART respectively.

S/N 0826 was used when new by Maranello; it was sold and ultimately restored. It has spent many years being well-cared-for in a large collection in the USA.

S/N 0838 was a NART car and was the only one of the above P-cars to finish the 1965 Le Mans race. It finished 7th overall and 1st in class. It is currently in the states and can often be seen at various concours.

The other NART car, S/N 0846 (#23), was one of the three famous 1967 Daytona cars lined up for the finish. This chassis did finish 1st overall, avenging the 1966 Le Mans defeat. The chassis was damaged in the 1967 Le Mans race and spent many years in storage. It has since been resurrected and can be seen at various concours in the USA.

The lone 250 LM S/N 6023 was campaigned by Francorchamps and had an excellent winning career. It has had a long list of owners since being retired but still soldiers on today at many vintage events across Europe.

There were three Dino 206 S racers at Le Mans. Unfortunately the little Dino was still new and fragile. None of them lasted long in a 24-hour race. The Dino serial numbers were S/N 008 and S/N 014 for the NART team and S/N 012 for the Maranello Concessionaires team. All three survive and sustained no major damage.

Lastly there were three 275 GTB/Cs. These were competition models of the beautiful 275 GTB. Built as its own special series, Ferrari ultimately built twelve chassis. All had alloy bodies and dry-sump engines. While looking very similar to their street brothers, these were very potent machines.

Only a handful were completed before Le Mans 1966. S/N 9015 was a NART car and did not finish but the other two did. The Maranello Concessionaires car S/N 9035 finished 8th overall and 1st in class. S/N 9027, the Francorchamps car, finished 10th overall 2nd in class.

Race #29 S/N 9035 8th Overall - 1st Class

All three of these cars survive today. While S/N 9015 remains in original as-raced condition, the other two have been exercised in vintage events around the world.

When watching 'Ford v Ferrari' take heart. Ford did win the overall race, and won Le Mans for the next three years. But Ferrari won its class and took the 8th and 10th spots with what was essentially a modified street car.

Ferrari came back at Daytona and humiliated Ford in their own backyard with a 1-2-3 finish in 1967 and took the 2nd and 3rd spots at the 1967 Le Mans. Ford spent millions of dollars to prove its ability to win. Ferrari was spending hundreds of thousands of dollars in its racing, and that included not only sports cars but the Formula One program.

Ford moved on from sports car racing and Ferrari has never left. You could almost say, Ford won a battle, but Ferrari won the war. Forza Ferrari!

Dino Rally to the Grand Canyon

By Glenn Butler

For those of us who wanted to enjoy more sunny days and scenic drives after the FCA National Meet, fellow Dino owner Scott McClure organized a Dino Rally for November 10 through 13, 2019.

Eight Dinos and a handful of modern Ferraris gathered in the host hotel parking lot on Sunday for a scheduled 9:30 am departure.

While most of the Dinos came from the western U.S., Jamie Holmes brought S/N 06640 from Ontario and I shipped S/N 04004 from Charlotte, NC.

However, I think the long distance award would have to go to Wolfhard and Renate Wiese for driving their 512 BB all the way from Sarasota, FL, en route to the West Coast before turning around and heading home.

Having previously owned a 512 BBi, I was envious of all the miles they were racking up in such a wonderful touring car. The rest of the Dinos departing from Sedona that morning were S/N 03110, S/N 04370, S/N 06146, S/N 06422, S/N 06472, and S/N 04610.

On tap for the first day was a scenic 211 mile route with a lunch stop in Prescott, AZ, followed by twisty roads through the Arizona mining country, then entering Oak Creek Canyon and the stunning Red Rocks of Sedona.

Rally master Scott McClure had meticulously planned all the details, including convenient fuel stops, great dining options, two support vehicles, and even free roadside service from Hagerty in the event of a mechanical issue.

Fortunately, no one had to utilize the previously mentioned benefit as there were no breakdowns over the entire length of the rally, which was approximately 800 miles.

We arrived at our hotel, The Amara Resort and Spa in Sedona, with enough time to check in, freshen up, and attend a complimentary wine reception. Scott came through with his choice of hotel while providing everyone with secure, private, covered parking and a nice goodie bag to greet everyone in their rooms.

On day two everyone got an early 8 am start as we had nearly 250 miles to cover and we were all anxious to see the highlight of the trip, the Grand Canyon.

Leading the way was Matthias Bartz, author of the Dino Compendium, who made the trip all the way from Germany.

Thanks to the generosity of Verna Griffiths, Bartz was driving S/N 06146, a beautiful silver GTS, for the length of the Rally.

Heading north out of Sedona, our route took us through Oak Creek Canyon ascending to the high desert plains of the vast Colorado Plateau.

We turned off Route 89 in Cameron, AZ, and headed west: after about 30 minutes we entered the national park, and stopped for scenic photos at Navajo Point.

Scott managed to get his drone out and take some phenomenal footage of all our Dinos with the Grand Canyon in the background!

Back in our Dinos, we made a beeline for our lunch stop at Bright Angel Lodge. A leisurely stop allowed everyone to enjoy a wonderful sitdown meal and afterwards soak in the scenic views and explore the areas around the lodge.

Around 2:30 pm we had to make a choice of heading back with the main group or sticking around for dinner and sunset views at El Tovar Dining Room.

I decided to head back and those of us that did enjoyed a spirited drive through the Arizona high country to our planned fuel stop in Flagstaff. An hour after dispatching the twisty canyon roads, we arrived back in Sedona just in time for happy hour.

Each evening the group tended to congregate at the hotel bar to socialize, and tonight was no exception. Unlike the previous night when several people had dinner reservations, most of us decided to eat at the hotel after a long day driving.

It was a fun evening filled with fine food, drink, and of course Ferrari and car talk in general. When everyone turned in, it was agreed that we would have a leisurely 9 am start for the final day.

Even though we got a late start, we were still planning to cover some 200 miles, with our primary destination being Route 66 and a particular corner in Winslow, AZ.

We covered ground fairly quickly, given a significant portion of the drive was on I-40 towards Winslow. Nevertheless, it was entertaining cruising between 80 and 90 mph in a long line of vintage Dinos.

After a fuel stop, Scott planned for each Dino to be photographed at the famous "corner in Winslow, Arizona."

While we tried to take over the corner with Dinos, there was a flat-bed Ford parked in the background – at least we were all taking it easy, just like the famous Eagles song.

After lunch at The Torquoise Room at La Posada, the group split with several of us heading directly back to the hotel while others took the scenic route over the Mogollon Rim to Montezuma Castle National Monument.

Once back in Sedona, we had an impromptu cocktail party at the home of Jim and Sandy Weder. Their home was the perfect location to enjoy an incredible Sedona sunset and was the perfect culmination to a very enjoyable rally.

Thanks for your hospitality, Jim and Sandy!

Back at the hotel we reminisced about the previous three days and the new friendships made.

Arizona was truly a wonderful destination to enjoy the pleasures of a vintage Ferrari and Scott McClure did an incredible job organizing and making the rally happen without any hiccups.

Everyone had such a good time that there are already discussions about holding future Dino Rallies.

The motor suspension drive train brakes and all mechanical systems are spot-on. Flawless paint, excellent chrome, top and interior. Converted by Strahman in the 1970's and perfected by Steve Moal, a noted body fabrication shop. This car cannot be told from one done by Scaglietti and there are none better.
